Three Rivers board could send $39M bond to voters

The Three Rivers School Board on Wednesday will consider asking voters to approve a $39 million general obligation bond in May.

The bond would pay for a number of safety and security measures at district facilities, including additional fencing, buzz-in entry systems, cameras, key card entry, security lighting and security doors and hardware.

It would also underwrite the reroofing of 18 school buildings in the district.

Approval of the bond would be rewarded by the state of Oregon with $6 million in matching grants, according to the district.
