RCC to host new powwow Saturday

Daily Courier

The first-ever Educational Opportunities Powwow is being held Saturday from noon to 9 p.m. on the Rogue Community College Redwood Campus, 3345 Redwood Highway in Grants Pass. The event will be in the field at the college's west entrance.

Admission is free.

Grand entries are planned at noon and again at 7 p.m., when dancers and others make a formal entry.

The master of ceremonies will provide guidance throughout the event, including when guests should stand, when photography is appropriate and when visitors may be invited to participate in certain dances.

The powwow is designed as both a cultural celebration and an educational opportunity. Tribal organizations, colleges, universities and local nonprofits will be on hand to share information about educational programs, career pathways, student support services, financial aid and scholarships and grants.

The event is especially intended to help high school students, college students and families explore opportunities for continuing their education.

It's all being hosted by RCC's Diversity Programming Board, along with David West and the Southern Oregon Indian Center.
